“Birth of a Rock Star”

Rolling Stone

“Listening to How Do You Sleep at Night? feels like someone finally landed on a new recipe in pop music—and it announces Teezo as one of the most exciting freshmen to debut in years.”

GQ

“A scrapbook of Teezo’s experiences over the past several years, the album dips into whatever genre best suits the moment.”

Los Angeles Times

“This love for dramatic highs and muted lows on this album makes the record a rollercoaster of emotions and sounds, and a polished and entertaining debut.”

NME

(June 11, 2024) - After completing his 24-date world tour just last week, Teezo Touchdown returns with the music video for his standout bonus track “Third Coast” from the deluxe version of his beloved and critically acclaimed debut album How Do You Sleep at Night? (Not Fit For Society / RCA Records). Praised by NPR, Los Angeles Times, CLASH, UPROXX, and earning him a cover on Rolling Stone’s The Future of Music issue, this latest offering shows Teezo in his truest form, an innovator whose priority is always his creative output.

Originally conceptualized by Rhiannon Wollmuth for a school project, this once-humble creation now shines as the official music video for Teezo Touchdown’s “Third Coast.” With its deliberate green screen effects, the video achieves an endearing quality and perfectly mirrors the carefree essence of the song.

Between appearing on tracks with Don Toliver, and Lil Yachty, joining fellow Texan rapper Travis Scott on his Circus Maximus tour, receiving praise from hip-hop legend André 3000, and releasing his genre-bending debut album How Do You Sleep at Night?, Teezo is creating a unique sound that serves as an ode to each genre that has shaped him as an artist. With his debut album How Do You Sleep at Night?, Teezo reached No. 1 on the alternative albums chart in 49 countries worldwide. The extended album, released earlier this year, includes three new songs, “Up and Down,” “Out of Respect” and “Third Coast,” all highlighting his signature Rock & Boom sound that has garnered him cosigns from music legends such as Madonna, Drake, Travis Scott, Tyler, The Creator and more, illuminating his presence as one of music’s most inventive new creators
